Franken stein books	"You propose," I replied, "fetter from the limitations of man, to dwell in the wilds where beasts... will be your only companions. How can you, who long for the love & sympathy of man, persevere in this exile?"	Victor does not appreciate anybody but his creation wants mankind's affection, but he can't get it, and Victor has this super ego/out of order, he's super intelligent but he isn't too compassionate however his creation represents the id, yet he's the one who wants a mate, wants to have compassion, but Victor isn't allowing him to have the chance to be worthy, while in his eyes Victor is the cruel one.
reptat	"How inconstant are your feelings! But a moment ago you were moved by my representations and why do you again burden yourself to my complaints? ... My life will flow away, and in my dying moments I will not curse my creator." ch 17	In this passage, the creature tells that he is content to live out the rest of his life quietly, unlike Victor who eternally strives to some sort of higher purpose thing, Frankenstein and his monster can represent the conforming and non-conforming aspects of the psyche.
doomed		The monster is the outcome / creation of Victor's knowledge so he is a prototype of a worldly norm but the monster lacks the knowledge of the world. Victor's knowledge over takes / overpowers him and the simplistic, naïve mind of the monster could help to enlighten his thinking.
Franken- go kill yourself	Yee f	Victor & the creature fit together b/c the creature was made for love and wants to love and interact w/ people, when Victor often denies this. They also work harmoniously b/c Victor is full of knowledge and acquired this knowledge from his curiosity. The creature also has an eagerness to learn and teaches himself, just like his creator did.

Victor and his creation are antithetical halves of a single being.
